

About the Author

John L. Luckner, EdD, is a professor and the coordinator of the deaf education teacher preparation program at the University of Northern Colorado. He is also a director of the National Center on Low Incidence Disabilities (NCLID), an expansive online integrated system of information and services that is organized around four goals: (1) Information Exchange; (2) Local Support; (3) Teacher Training; and (4) Knowledge Advancement (www.nclid.unco.edu).

Dr. Luckner was a classroom teacher of the deaf for 9 years, 5 years in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and 4 years in the United States Virgin Islands. He has taught individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing from infants to graduate students. He has worked with local education agencies, state agencies, and residential schools for the deaf to develop curricula and to provide staff development. He has made several international and numerous national and state level presentations. He is the author of more than 60 journal articles and the co-author of two books titled Effectively Educating Students with Hearing Impairments and Processing the Experience: Strategies to Enhance and Generalize Learning. The editor of a monograph titled Written-language assessment and intervention: Links to literacy, he also serves on the editorial review board for the American Annals of the Deaf, The Volta Review, and the Communication Disorders Quarterly. He lives in Greeley, Colorado, with his wife Sue and daughter Maya. He can be contacted at:
